

Johnny Indovina (singer /songwriter) is best known for his intense and thought provoking work, both solo and with his former band Human Drama. Through years of sold-out live performances and critically acclaimed albums, Indovina's insightful songs about the frailties of the human condition have consistently found a hungry audience and a constantly growing fan base.

From 1985 until 2004, Johnny Indovina fronted the underground/goth band Human Drama. From their formation in New Orleans, through their scaling the heights of the fertile mid 1980's Los Angeles club scene, their moving live shows, fueled by Indovina's poetic imagery, built a huge following.

The combination of Indovina's impeccable songwriting and the band's fast-growing popularity led to a contract with RCA records in 1988. They released two records, "Hopes Prayers Dreams Heart Soul Mind Love Life Death" and "Feel", before moving to Triple X records in 1991. There, they produced what many consider Indovina's masterpiece, "The World Inside", beginning a string of critical successes which continued with "Pinups", "The Human Drama EP", "Songs of Betrayal", "14,384 Days Later", "Solemn Sun Setting", "In a Perfect World: the Best of Human Drama", "Moments in Time", and "Cause and Effect". Despite flourishing primarily in the USA underground, Indovina and Human Drama achieved almost legendary status within the large gothic communities of Mexico and Latin America.

Yet it is perhaps on "Moments in Time" that Indovina's brilliance shines brightest. This collection of live solo performances was culled from shows in such far reaching venues as Cafe Bizarro in Mexico City and CBGB's in New York. In these intimate settings, stripped down to their simplest form, Indovina's compositions easily pass a song's ultimate test - a singer alone with a guitar, no additional instruments or voices.

After ending Human Drama in 2005, Indovina created Sound Of The Blue Heart, which released its debut album "Beauty" in 2006. The second release by Sound of the Blue Heart, "Wind of Change" was released in July, 2009.
